Just heard from the principal: new district policy going forward is that we can't suspend students anymore and instead have to use "restorative justice". Are you kidding me? Get ready for the teacher exodus. Maybe if the "top brass" spent a day in the classroom they'd think differently.

You might want to sit down for this one.....Word on the street is that all the central office admins are getting 6% raises next year while us lowly school employees who do the real work get nothing. Give me a break. Just another example of a trash district dumping on those around them.

I am wrapping up the school year, and here's what I know. Teachers are leaving, and they are leaving in droves. There are vacancies at my school for next year and all of the schools in the surrounding area. Why are they leaving? Because they work for beans for an administration who would rather get an accolade at a national conference than stand up for the ones doing the work on the ground. This district is on a rapid decline. If you want my advice: Homeschool your kids.

Gonna take a break from posting for a little while because I need some mental health time this summer to recharge for the crap that I know is going to be thrown at us in July when we return. Take care, everyone. Thanks for following. Oh, and DM me if you want that homeschool link. :)

I'm baaaaaaack. And guess what? I already have some news to share with you. The district is adding a load of new benchmark assessments this year and mandating some scripted curriculum to boot. Just taking away more and more teaching time and academic freedom. Mercy. Will they never learn? LET US DO OUR JOBS!
